Career Opportunities and Pathways

There are many career options for English majors. Any job that requires critical thinking, writing, and reading skills would be good for our majors.

These include: editing, reading screenplays, manuscripts procuring, professional writing, journalism, publishing, working for non-profits, federal/state government, higher education (staff, professorial, administration), online publishing, freelance writing, managing editor, copywriting, technical writing, travel writing, high school teaching, trade publishing, information technology, proposal manager, web developer, human resources, marketing, professional careers (law, business), arts and culture administration, cultural attach  , book, theatre, and film reviewing, greeting cards/jingle writing, radio/film industry, sales, circulation, publicity, promotion, test preparation, libraries, museums, research, tutoring, public relations, fund raising, customer service, lobbying.

Suggested Minors/Upper Division Electives

It is almost as easy to get a second major as it is to have a minor. So do consider switching your minor to a second major. Remember that when employers see additions to your major on the transcript (certificates, minors, second majors) it tells them that you are a hard worker and have other skills that may be very attractive to them. You never know: your second major may end up being the career path you follow, so think carefully about this option.

There are almost unlimited combinations, depending upon your interests: Many of our students combine their English major with a second major in Anthropology, American Studies, Communication & Journalism, History, Theatre, Art History, IMDB, Economics, FLL, Spanish & Portuguese, Women Studies, Linguistics, BA/MD, Philosophy, Political Science, Psychology, Sociology; the sciences have also been chosen as a second major by our English majors.
